

I am against NCVEC's petition. There is no need for a new entry-level license when the codeless Technician Class already exists. In addition, current licensees should not be automatically upgraded to higher levels without proper testing. Also, the NCVEC's requirement prohibiting homebuilt equipment is absolutely contrary to the spirit of the amateur radio service. Finally, I disagree with their stance that testing for Morse code be totally abolished. Again, I am adamantly opposed to the NCVEC's petition.

Sincerely,

Erik Dean, NI6G
